SEASON #7 (SPRING 2004) COPPER RECAP:

After a one season exit from the Copper Leagues, the newly formed Copper Phantoms would return to the league that started it all. As the Phantoms began play, they continued to follow in the footsteps that the original Phantoms left, before they would be forced into Bronze. During the first five games of the season, the team posted a record of 4-1, including capturing two of those victories in overtime. However, then the team fell into a tail spin, as three straight losses made the post-season chances look like a dream. During the final three games of the regular season, the team needed to capture three wins to assure themselves of a post-season slot. With the pressure on, the team rose to the challenge as they captured 3 straight wins, including a 9-3 victory to get revenge over the White Tigers to close out the regular season. For the fifth time in six seasons of Copper Hockey, the Phantoms would advance into the post-season. However, just like the Bronze Phantoms ended their season, goaltender struggles in the post-season would watch the Legion overcome the Phantoms and capture a 5-3 victory in first-round action. The Phantoms for only the second time in six seasons of the Copper Play-offs, would see a first-round exit. The team ended with a 7-5 record.
