SEASON #8 (SUMMER 2004) RECAP:

8th edition of the Phantoms would start out on a positive note. But every now and then, life throws out a curve. During what would become most of the season, the Phantoms would experience roster shortages and league fee issues that would cast a rather difficult spin on the season. Nonetheless, the Phantoms overcame these issues, and with only 6-7 skaters per game, the team climbed into the post-season for its sixth straight season and its 7th in the 8 season history of the team. During the post-season, the team would face-off against Maly's and while the shortened bench would play toe-to-toe with the blue-shirts, Maly's would capitalize on two defensive break-downs late in the game to climb above the Phantoms and capture the victory. High-lights of the season would have to be a tremendous 3-1 victory over the Stick Heads about mid-way into the season and in the final week it would be known that this victory would keep the play-off hunt in the Phantom's hands. Add another huge victory over the Rage in Overtime during the final game of the season, and the post-season tradition would continue. Out of the 8 team Copper alliance, the Phantoms would finish 3rd in the league in scoring (58 regular season goals) and tied for 3rd with the best defensive record, with 43 goals against during the regular season. Those numbers reflect a complete turnaround the team made, as during the first few weeks the Phantoms were near last in every category.
